

Many have done their part to keep OCP alive

Like many who call Owosso home, the Lebowsky Center has become a part of me. I was a volunteer at the Lebowsky before I was an executive.

In fact, I've been a volunteer ever since too. Being involved in OCP productions has given me, like so many others, a large and diverse theatre family that makes it possible for every show to go on.

As I stood frozen to Park Street early Wednesday morning and watched the destruction of Owosso's historic theater, that family was everywhere.

They were oblivious to the freezing temperatures and the late hours. Crowds of people gathered all around the block, watching and talking and laughing and crying.

Mostly crying.

And in this time of crisis—a "death in the family" so to speak—many people who have already given so much have given a lot more. I'm proud to be part of that OCP family, especially over the last three days.

While they haven't renewed their mission to be applauded or praised, I'd like our community to know whose efforts are keeping the Owosso Community Players alive: John & Joanne Morovitz, Linda & Charlie Keenan, Al Moll, Anna Owens, Deb & Carl Knipe, Jerry Frezon, Mary Jo Damm-Strong, Mike Kruskowski, Joel Perkin, Tracy Gulick, Harry Wilson, Jeff Murdoch, Steve & Charlotte Hoshal, Chris Sprink, Jessica Dryer, Jim Matla, Dennis Bohac, Mike Windnagle, Stacey Woodworth, Kari Riggio, Helen Griffus, Mardie Hornus, and the entire cast & crew of "Beauty & The Beast".

Thank you just doesn't cover it.
